

The Council is excited to announce our newest staff person. Jean Weber will begin as our new Management Assistant on June 9, 2015. Jean says she is very excited about working with the Idaho Council on Developmental Disabilities. She comes from Boise State University where she worked in the College of Engineering and the Human Resource Services department. She has solid experience working with appropriated and grant-funded budgets, but her passion is communications, which is what her degree is in. When asked about why she was interested in working with us, she said she was looking for work that was "soul-satisfying," and would be something she could get truly engaged in. She is looking forward to meeting everyone here, and is planning on developing long-lasting partnerships.

Prior to Boise State, Jean worked for Washington Group and the Idaho Department of Correction. Before coming here from California she worked in recruiting and in marketing for a civil engineering company. Jean and her husband, Jim, live in Eagle with one of their daughters and one of their grandsons (a matched set), two dogs, and a cat. They have an additional two daughters, one son, and five more grandchildren. Jean enjoys gardening, traveling, knitting, reading, and cooking.
